Petrochemical price monitor

- Slow demand ate into olefins prices. Muted regional buying trends, especially in China due to the National Day Golden Week starting from Oct 2, continued to influence petrochemical product prices in the region. Ethylene prices in Asia fell 1.5% WoW to an 11-week low of US$1,470/t, though remained above the YTD average of US$1,456/t. Demand for downstream products remained sluggish on seasonality and the slowdown in China's economy, leading PE prices down 0.3-0.6% WoW. We believe slowed demand and abundant supply will continue to keep buyers sidelined in anticipation of further falls in price from current levels. Still, much cheaper naphtha cost widened PE-naphtha spread 1.2-2.4% WoW.
- PX down WoW to 20-week low. PX price nosedived 5% WoW to US$1,203/t after the previous week's increase, the largest WoW decline since early July 2014. This reflects market anticipation of more production cuts by PTA producers in coming weeks after the recent weak PTA-PX spread. The startup of new PTA capacity in China will be offset by maintenance shutdowns of other plants in the region. We expect PX price to continue to decline in the near term on seasonality.
- Strong PET/PTA spread may not be sustained for long. The sharp decline in PX price helped lift integrated PET/PTA spread 13.6% WoW to a 26-week high of US$321/t despite weakening PET and PTA prices, pressured down by lower feedstock cost. Bottle-grade PET price dropped 2.7% WoW in the SEA market amidst crippled buying sentiment. We do not expect the strong PET/PTA spread to hang on for long, as buyers of downstream products will bargain prices down given the steady decline in feedstock prices.

Investment view: Bearish sentiment towards the Petrochemical sector continued, pressuring the index down 5.1% WoW and underperforming the market (-2.7% WoW). This reaffirms our view that market concerns on the sector's performance in 3Q14 will continue to depress share price in the near term. We maintain our stance that investors should stay on the sidelines before reentering after 3Q14 results are released in mid-Nov.
