PDP2024: Focus on renewables; but timeline shift

The new PDP 2024 will focus on a higher proportion of renewable energy, hydropower plants and hydrogen, while placing less emphasis on gas and coal-fired power plants. However, concerns are the longer-than-expected timeline for new renewable energy additions, with the first large batch coming on line in 2032. Moreover, the recent LNG price hike of 27.2% in 2Q24 QTD is expected to impact SPP margins in 2H24. Our top sector pick is GULF due to its solid 2Q24 performance and lower impact from the rise in LNG prices. We maintain Neutral on GPSC and BGRIM.

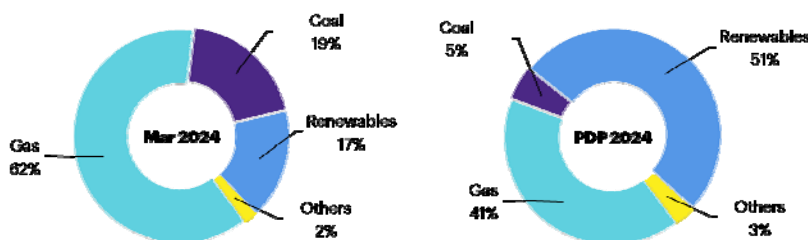

PDP2024 to focus more on renewable sources. On June 12-19, the Energy Policy and Planning Office (EPPO) held a public hearing on the draft of the new power development plan (PDP) for 2024-2037. The key details are: 1) Electricity demand forecast: A CAGR of 3.5% is projected for electricity demand during 2024-2037, driven by average GDP growth of 3.1%, rising demand for electric vehicles (EVs), high-speed trains and green data center projects. 2) Electricity supply focus: EPPO plans to prioritize renewable energy sources, aiming for them to account for 51% of the total electricity generation by 2037. This is a significant increase compared to the previous PDP 2018 Rev.1, which targeted only 36% from renewable sources by 2037. Additionally, EPPO intends to increase the proportion of hydropower imports from neighboring countries, particularly Laos, to 15% of total electricity generation in 2037, from 9% previously. To promote clean/green energy and address declining gas supplies along with reserve depletion in the Gulf of Thailand, EPPO also plans to reduce the reliance on gas-fired power plants, expecting their share to decrease from 53% to 41% by 2037. 3) Electricity tariff cap: EPPO aims to cap the electricity tariff at no more than Bt4 per kWh. The average electricity price forecast for the new PDP 2024 is ~Bt3.8704 per unit in 2024-2037, which is lower than the Bt3.9479 per unit projected in PDP 2018 Rev.1. 4) Loss of load expectation (LOLE) criteria: For reliability purposes, the new PDP 2024 uses the LOLE criteria instead of the previous reserve margin criteria. LOLE should not exceed 0.7 days per year, or in other words, a maximum of 17 hours out of 8,760 hours.

Implications of the new PDP for Thai utilities. We expect the new PDP 2024 to benefit the Thai utilities sector in the medium to long term. The new plan focuses on power capacity additions within Thailand, which generally have lower risks, appropriate returns and closer monitoring than overseas projects. However, investors might be disappointed by two key issues: 1) the longer-than-expected timeline for new renewable energy additions, with the first large batch coming on line only in 2032, and 2) the increasing proportion of LNG imports for long term that could lead to higher gas costs for SPPs selling to industries, potentially pressuring their margins. The recent surge in LNG prices to US$12.1 per million British thermal units (mmbTU) further intensifies these concerns, considering that Thailand imports roughly 20% of total LNG gas used for power generation.

Top picks. We maintain our 3-month tactical rating on GULF as Outperform, reflecting its potential to be a winner in the upcoming bidding for both renewable energy (35GW in PDP 2024) and gas-fired power plant replacement (2.6GW). We still expect GULF's earnings to be strong in 2Q24 due to the full quarter recognition of revenue from new GPD and HKP projects. We maintain our Neutral rating on GPSC and BGRIM, although we expect their 2Q24 earnings to improve from the restructuring of gas prices. However, there is negative sentiment surrounding the potential for higher gas costs in 3Q24 due to the current high LNG price.

Key risks: Higher than expected gas cost. Key ESG risks are the environmental impact from its exposure to fossil fuels, energy management, high greenhouse gas emission, and nearby community impact.

The PDP 2024 will focus more on renewable energy and less focus on gas & coal

The impact from the rising LNG prices. To assess the potential impact of rising gas costs, we conducted a sensitivity analysis on the earnings of the three power generation companies under coverage: 1) GPSC: every Bt1 mmBTU increase in gas cost is estimated to erode annual profit by Bt25mn, equivalent to ~0.5% of our 2024 earnings forecasts, 2) BGRIM: every Bt1/mmBTU increase in gas cost is estimated to decrease annual profit by Bt15mn, equivalent to approximately 0.6% of our 2024 earnings forecast, and 3) GULF: every Bt1/mmBTU increase in gas cost is estimated to cut annual profit by Bt12mn, equivalent to approximately 0.06% of our 2024 earnings forecast.
